The Boy Who Rebuilt Smiles After the Bombs

(Inspired by the true story of 12-year-old Sa'id Khamees Al-Halabi)

The schoolyard wasn't a place to learn for Sa'id - it was a place where laughter used to echo before the bombs came.

The first time it was hit, Sa'id was standing at the gate, waiting for the children to arrive.

One second, there was a morning breeze. The next - dust, fire, and silence.

"I was just a few steps away from where the missile landed," he said later, quietly.

"But Allah saved me."

A few days later, another strike.

This time, Sa'id was there for something small - to fix a broken trampoline.

The same trampoline that made children forget war for a moment.

He had planned to tighten a few screws. Maybe bounce once or twice himself.

But before he could even touch it... the ground shook again.

The place where the trampoline usually stood was ripped open by shrapnel.

Most boys would never return to that yard. But Sa'id wasn't like most boys.

On Eid al-Fitr, when other children barely had clothes or food, he showed up - not to play, but to give.

Youth groups came to the school with small toys and balloons. Sa'id brought the trampoline. He opened it up for free.

Let every displaced child jump. Laugh. Fly for just a moment.

"I need money," he admitted, "but that day... I was rich with happiness."

He saw smiles that hadn't surfaced in weeks. Laughter rising above the ruins.

Children shouting, "Higher! Higher!" - as if trying to reach the sky and tell the world they were still alive.

At night, Sa'id walked home past the rubble. There were no lights, but his heart was glowing.

Because in a world that kept trying to break him, he had chosen to rebuild.

Not walls. Not buildings. But smiles.

To Sa'id, a true Guardian of Al-Aqsa - not with armour, but with joy.

Not with anger, but with heart.

Action Steps to Protect al Aqsa

1

Learn

Know the history of Masjid al-Aqsa, its role in Islam, and the stories of those who protected it and share it with others.

 Knowledge is the first shield.

2

Make dua

Raise your hands and ask Allah to protect Al-Aqsa and its people in every salah. Catch the times when dua is accepted.

 Even silent prayers shake the skies.

3

Speak up

Share posts, stories, and facts with friends and family. Let others know what's happening.

 Your voice matters more than you think.

4

Give

Support trusted charities helping families in Palestine — even a small amount goes far.

🇵🇸 Charity protects and heals.

5

Teach others

Tell your siblings, students, or children about Al-Aqsa.

Let the love spread like light. Gift them a book on Al Aqsa.

🌱 Hearts that know, hearts that care.

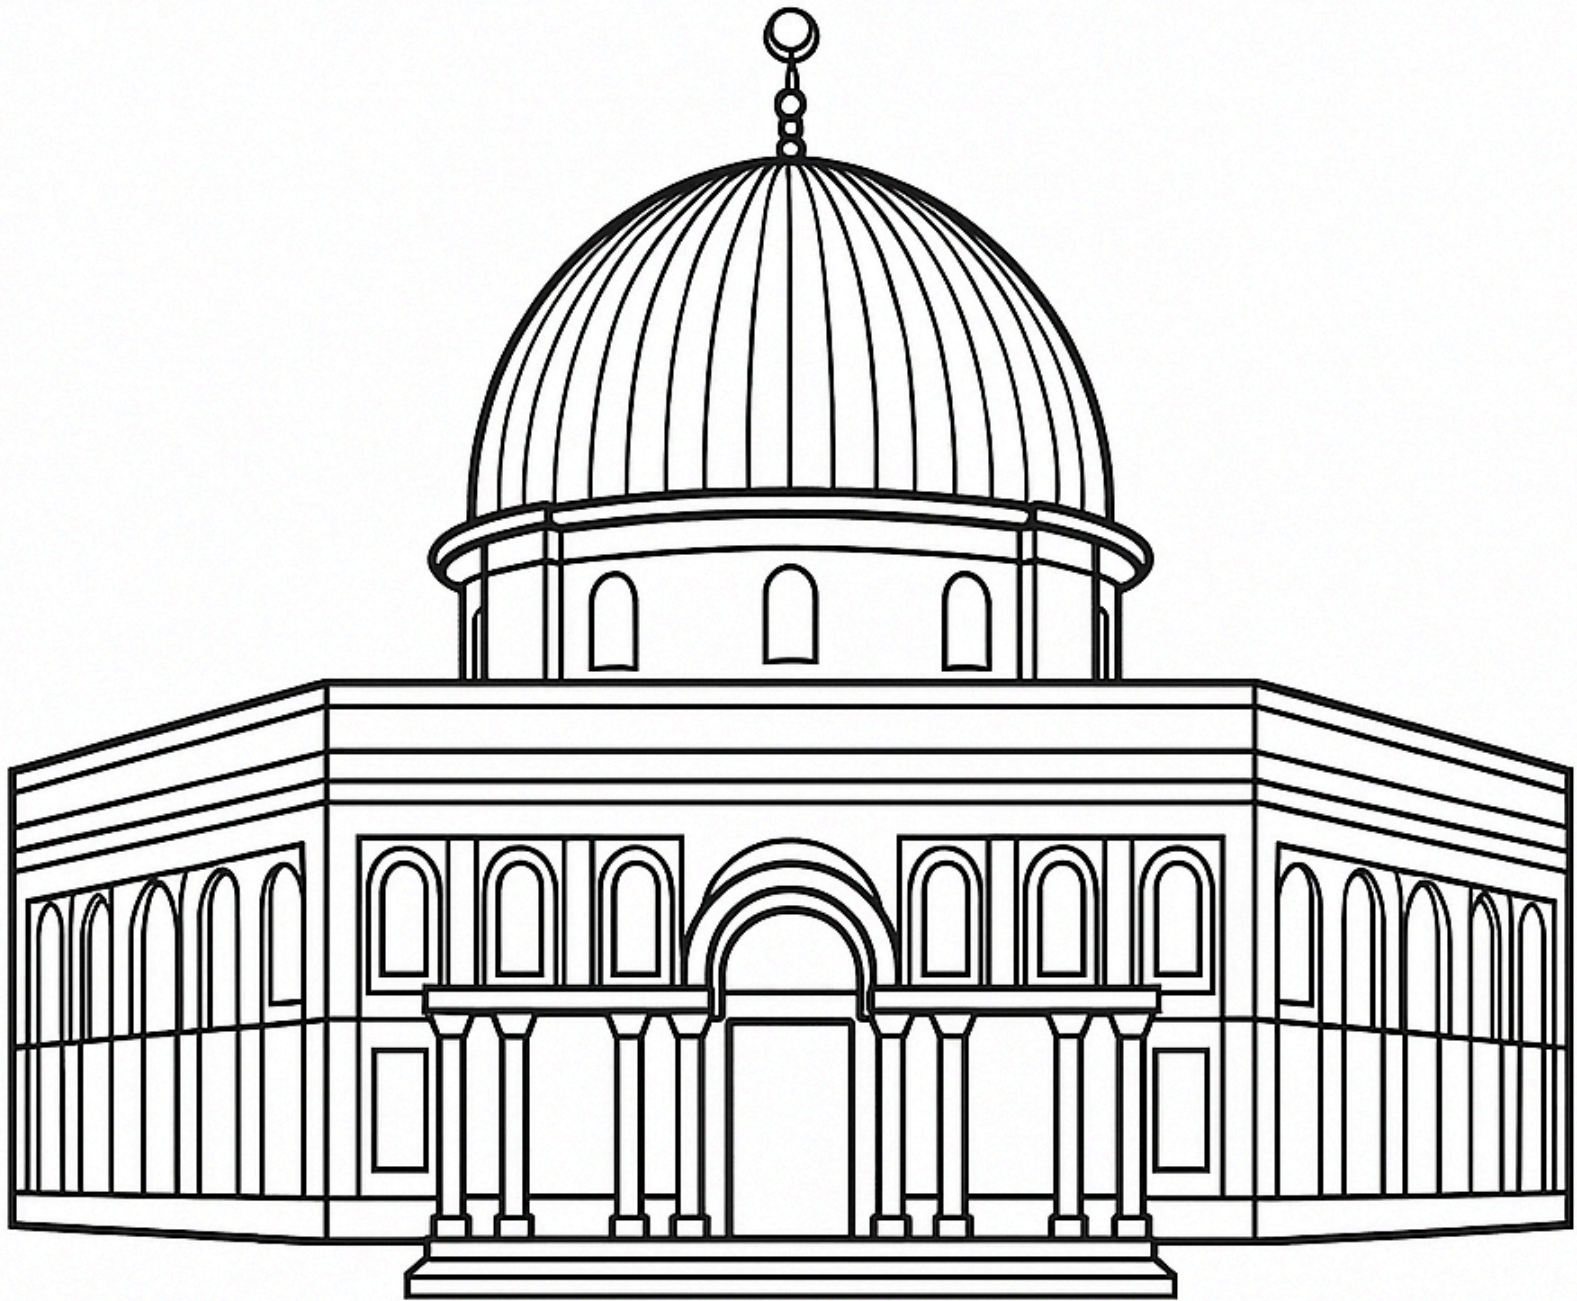

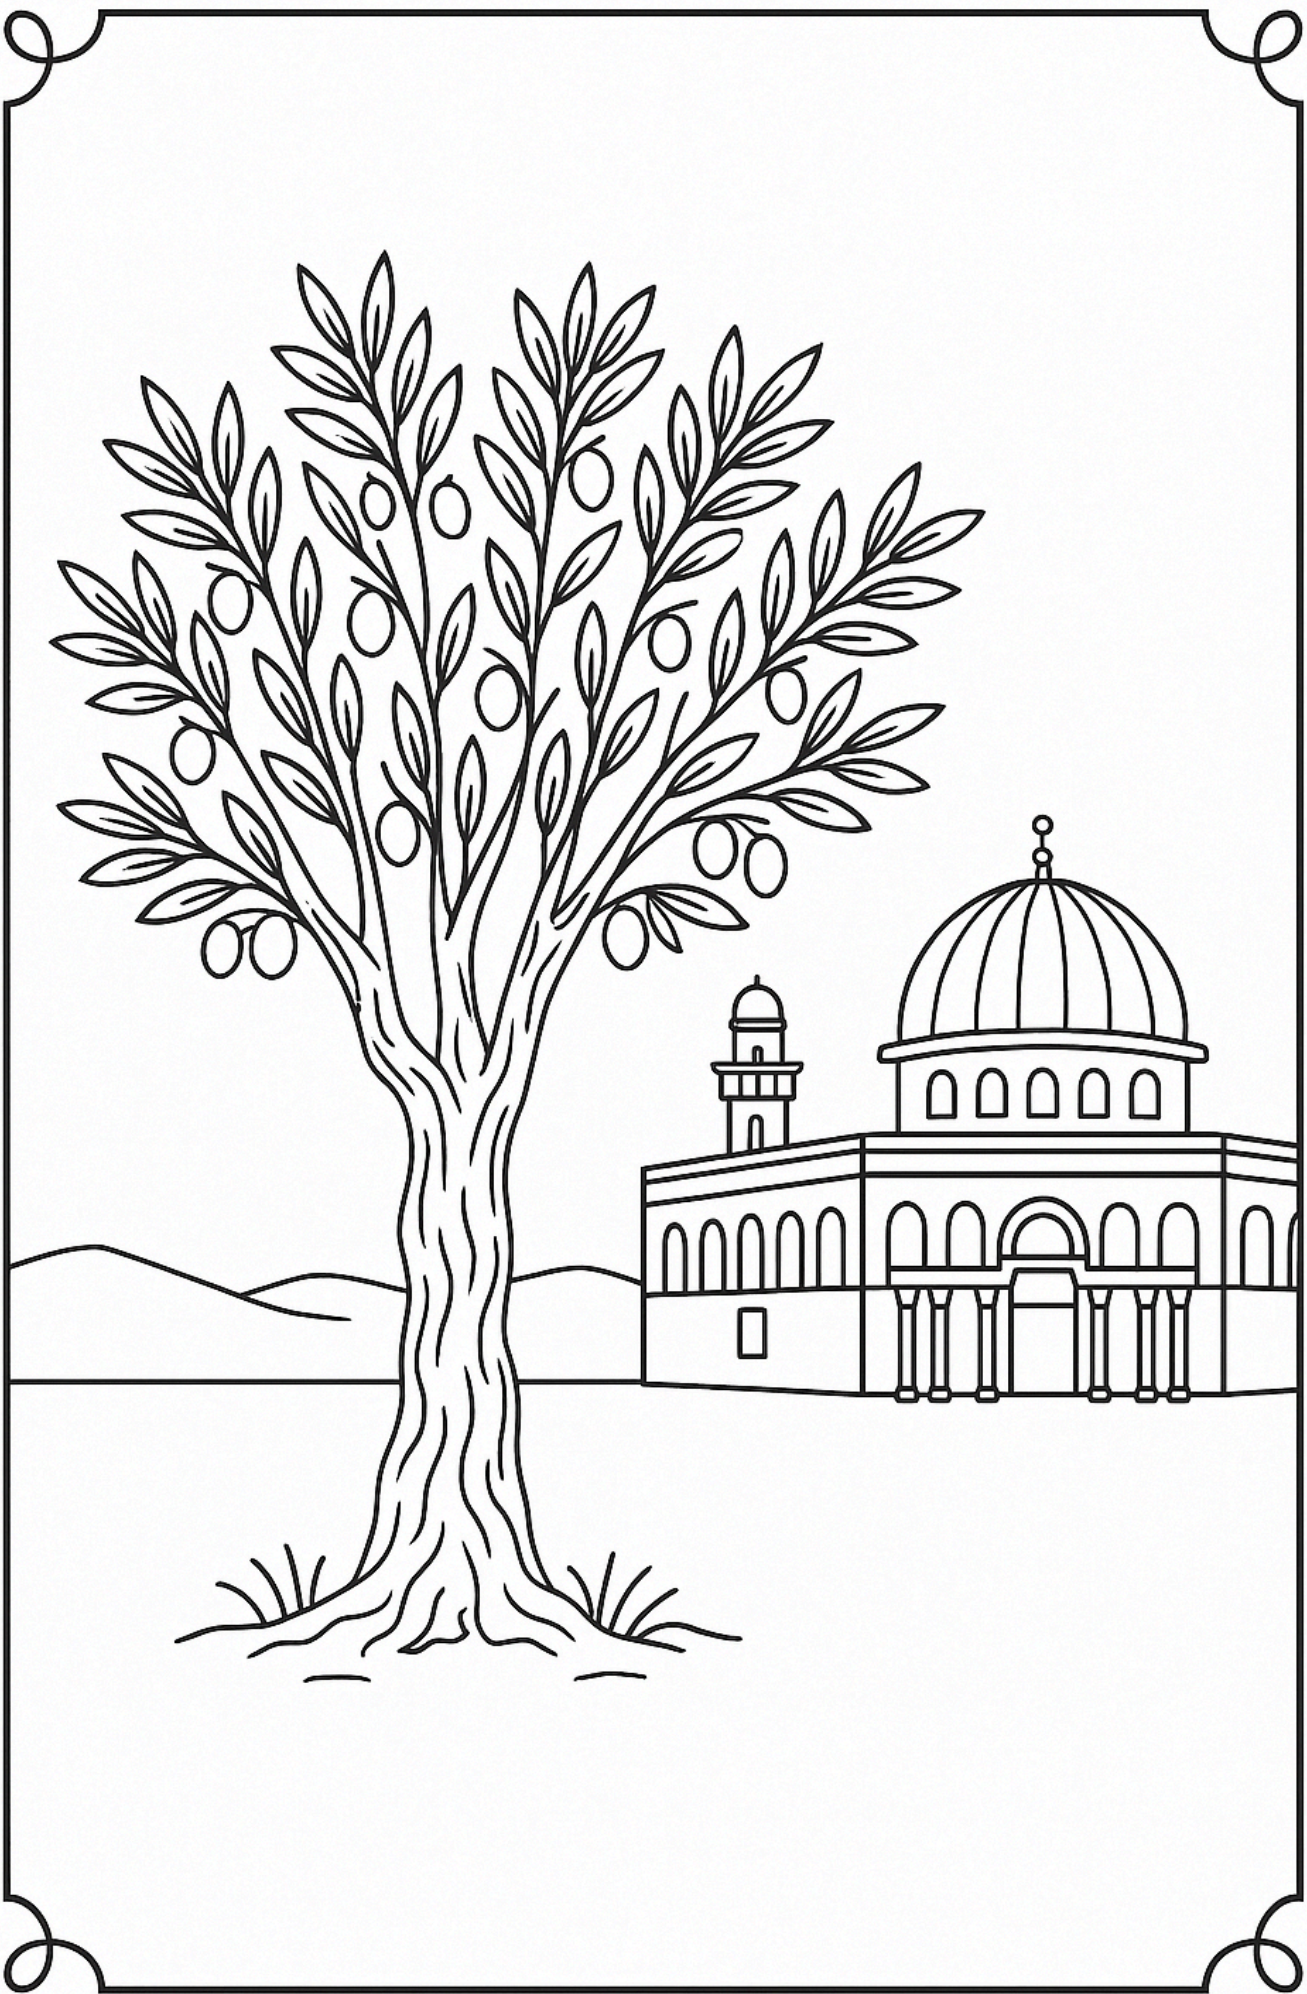

Dua for the People of Palestine

رَبَّنَا أَفْرِغْ عَلَيْهِمْ صَبْرًا وَثَبِّتْ أَقْدَامَهُمْ
وَأَنْصُرْهُمْ عَلَى الْقَوْمِ
الْكَافِرِينَ

Our Lord! Shower them with perseverance, make their steps firm,
and give them victory
over the disbelieving people

Let's Color Masjid al Aqsa

The background features a light beige, textured surface with visible brushstrokes. A large, dark reddish-brown circular shape is in the top right corner. The image is framed by thin, dark lines and small square motifs at the corners.

You dont need to travel to Jerusalem to defend it-Just care enough to teach
